

Germany and Ukrainia Agree to Peace, Which Splits the Russian Republic

AGREEMENT IS FORMALLY ANNOUNCED BY BERLIN

(Continued from First Page.)

Today's act was only intervention of the Bolshevik delegates themselves that saved their political opponents from violence at the hands of the Bolshevik troops.

The final act of the assembly was the formal proclamation of Russia as a democratic republic. The speech of former Minister Tseretelli was dramatic. He was constantly interrupted, many times with violent abuse. The concluding peroration was a pathetic appeal to all that the revolution be permitted to bear fruit in the formation of a government which would show a safe front of all classes of the revolutionary democracy.

Soviets in Control.
The Bolshevik and social revolutionaries of the Left, together with others who favor pan-Russian workmen, soldiers and peasant congresses to take the place of the constituent assembly, were working hard today to achieve this sort of a law-giving body. The Soviets completely control the situation, and will undoubtedly carry through their program complete.

"What happened the constituent assembly simply represents the struggle now going on everywhere," said the Bolshevik minister of agriculture, H. Kelogovskiy, in an interview with the United Press today. "The Right parties cannot remain alone and exercise power in the constituent assembly for the people do not recognize them. The people are behind the Soviets. Should the parties of the Right challenge the authority and power of the Soviets—it simply means an extension of the civil war now raging."

It was reported today that the people's commissaries desire to take the Brest-Litovsk negotiations out of the hands of the present delegation, although they assert their adherence to the conditions of the armistice.

Ministers Slain.
On Sunday night former Czarist Ministers Kokoshkin and Shingarev, who were recently transferred to a hospital from the fortress of St. Peter and Paul, were killed by a band of sailors and workmen. Their assassination, together with the anti-Bolshevik action, was the result of the Bolsheviks' desire to close down of the constituent assembly, has brought about the most intensely bitter feeling between the Right and Left parties.

A delegation of constituent assembly leaders who called on Nicholas Lenin today in protest against the Bolshevik action were told by the Bolshevik leaders that permission would be withheld for them to assemble anywhere and that instead of their conference a national convention would be formed by the forthcoming Soviet congress.

All newspapers containing detailed accounts of the constituent meetings were confiscated today.

Lenine himself introduced the resolution decreeing in the assembly a ninety-minute speech lauded the highest power of democracy in the world. He said he considered the most resolute action which the democratic proposed as the only means remaining—the Russian people otherwise were doomed.

AUSTRIAN PEACE STRIKES SPREAD, CAUSING KAISER TO SEND GERMAN TROOPS

BURCH, Jan. 21.—General strikes, declared Friday, are spreading throughout Austria. Leaders of the movement have issued a manifesto demanding assurances that peace negotiations be not frustrated through territorial demands of the Germans.

At Budapest the entire railway, tramway, and underground services have stopped. Thirty-one strikers' meetings were held. At Cracow the shops have been closed and the public forbidden to congregate on the streets at night. The strike movement is spreading to Bohemia and Moldavia.

Emperor Karl summoned the mayor of Graz to Vienna, but the mayor telephoned to the palace that the situation at Graz "was too serious for him to leave."

BERNE, Jan. 21.—Germany has sent large forces of soldiers into Austrian industrial centers with orders to shoot down rioting strikers and to force them back into the factories, according to information received today from the Austrian frontier.

ADVERTISEMENT

How Old Are You By Your Hair?

You may be thirty in years, but if you are bald-headed, gray, or your hair is dry, brittle, scraggly and ugly-looking, people will surely take you to be many years older.

When your hair becomes faded, dry, streaked and scraggly, when it falls out badly and new hair cannot grow, the roots should be immediately vitalized and properly nourished. To do this quickly, safely and at little expense, there is nothing so effective as Parisian hair lotion because it makes the hair soft, lustrous, easy to arrange attractively and appear heavier than it really is.

A massage with Parisian sage is a real delight—it not only keeps the scalp cool and healthy, but also keeps the hair free from dandruff and itching. It is a great demand by discriminating women because it makes the hair so soft, lustrous, easy to arrange attractively and appear heavier than it really is.

Parisian hair lotion is a real delight—it not only keeps the scalp cool and healthy, but also keeps the hair free from dandruff and itching. It is a great demand by discriminating women because it makes the hair so soft, lustrous, easy to arrange attractively and appear heavier than it really is.

ROOSEVELT MOST POTENT FRIEND OF KAISER-STONE

(Continued from First Page.)

I charge that Theodore Roosevelt is the most potent and willing friend of the Kaiser in America.

Stone Assails Penrose.
"I will not now particularize about his former very close intimacy with the Kaiser himself, and with the Kaiser's American ambassador, Count Bernstorff; that particularization is unnecessary. There things are historical. I cannot escape the belief that this exceptional intimacy, which has played so many games of hide-and-seek, is his particular brand for a very great stake."

Senator Stone also assailed Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, and Chairman William R. Wilcox, of the Republican national committee, whom he accused of leading the Republican assault upon the war administration. "The recent tendency of many, not all, but many Republican Senators, acting here in this body in manifest concert with persons in and out of politics, throughout the country, to make political capital out of the war has become too evident to be longer passed in silence," said Senator Stone.

"I think the time has come to strike a final blow, if that be possible, against partisan activity in the conduct of the war. I think this spirit of partisanship should be struck dead at once. There is no need for us to be over fastidious about this or to try to fool each other or to fool the country. Republican leaders in and out of politics are, undoubtedly, seeking to make political out of the war."

Let None Be Deceived.
"There is to be an election next fall. A new House of Representatives and one third of the Senate are to be chosen. Here is a chance to the dominant Republican politicians of the country to make a record, perhaps not more than one of them, seeking to promote his immediate personal glorification, and others acting on a larger scale let it be said, to promote a party advantage—to strike hard to turn down this Administration and take the Government over into their own hands. That fight is now on. Let no man deceive himself about this."

Senator Stone declared that the resolutions calling for the numerous Congressional investigations into the conduct of the war came almost exclusively from the Republican side. He quoted from recent published interviews of Senator Penrose and Chairman Wilcox to sustain his charge that the Republicans are playing politics. He based his accusation mainly, however, upon the editorials written by Colonel Roosevelt for the Kansas City Star.

His Star Witness.
"I now introduce my star witness, Theodore Roosevelt, himself, whom I characterize as the most seditious man of consequence in America," he said. "The heart of this man is aflame with ambition, and he runs amuck. On my responsibility as a Senator, I charge that since our entrance into the war Roosevelt has been a menace and obstruction to the successful prosecution of the war. His chief thought has not been to help the Government solve the weighty problems it has had to solve, but always his chief thought has been of Roosevelt."

"Almost every day this man speaks in bitter and contemptuous disparagement of the President and of the majority members of Congress. Every week, for a long time, he has been at it still publishing under contract for money consideration—think of it, for money—villainous screeds in the Kansas City Star, which paper has a wide circulation in several States, attacking the President and the Government."

Senator Stone read a number of these editorials, and stamped them "in substance and effect, false words."

BELL-ANS

Absolutely Removes Indigestion. Druggists refund money if it fails. 25c

BILLION IS NEEDED FOR RAILROADS, IS M'ADOO'S CLAIM

(Continued from First Page.)

Washington today is observing (the usual words, "enjoying" or "celebrating" don't go) its most unique holiday since the Capital was established on the shores of the Potomac. Factories, business houses, stores, and offices are closed, while the Government offices and the schools are open.

Holidays in Washington are generally the reverse of this. On no other holiday have the Government employees as a body ever had to work and the school children attend classes while others were "off."

Washington's first "heatless" Monday will give some opportunity to catch up on depleted coal supplies, though the saving will be slight, and principally in the big department store buildings.

U. S. Offices Heated.
Most of the big office buildings were at least partially heated because they housed Government offices.

The hotels and apartment houses were operating, and the stores were unloading freight in Washington yards to help clear away congestion.

Dr. Garfield is hopeful that persons generally will observe the spirit as well as the letter of the closing order.

Food stores, which in the original order were permitted to remain open only half a day, were granted a special dispensation last night under which they are permitted to sell goods throughout the day. Under the terms of the order, drug stores, which are to be open all day, can consume fuel for heating the latter part of the day for the sale of drugs and medical supplies only, but the Fuel Administration realizes that if the stores are open and heated there is nothing to prevent other sales.

The order for "heatless" Mondays will be considerably tightened up by redrafting certain features before next Monday, it was learned today. With the experience of the first day and the deluge of requests for interpretation as a guide, the order will be considerably amended so as to leave less room for equivocation. It is possible that the words "light" and "power" will be included in section 4, denying light and power for elevators to stores and offices on closing days.

Motion pictures theaters, bowling alleys, billiard rooms, dance halls, and other amusements are open as usual today, but they will be closed tomorrow. There are many stores in Washington on the first floors of apartment houses, or which are in reality, front rooms of residence property. In some cases heat cannot be shut off from such stores entirely. Officials of the fuel administration have been puzzled by requests for interpretation in many instances, but no general rule will be laid down for the future, because it is felt that general rules would pave the way for general evasion.

The change in ruling regarding food stores was made last night because of various interpretations that had been placed by State fuel administrators on the section of the order dealing with the distribution of food-stuffs.

The following telegram was sent last night to State fuel administrators instructing them to the change:

"As a result of information furnished by the food administration to the effect that confusion exists in the minds of the public as to the closing of food distributing stores on Monday afternoons the order of the fuel administration, dated January 17, has been suspended in so far as it provides for the closing of such food stores on Monday, January 21. This will permit food stores to remain open the entire day."

Most of the automobile salesrooms of the city were closed today. The automobile men, in most cases determined to obey the spirit of the fuel order, even though in instances showrooms were so situated that all heat could not be shut off. Some of the service stations were open, for service only.

An agreement for uniform observance on future Mondays will probably be drawn at a meeting of the Automobile Trade Association to be held this week.

CAPITAL OBSERVES GARFIELD HOLIDAY IN STORE AND PLANT

(Continued from First Page.)

Washington today is observing (the usual words, "enjoying" or "celebrating" don't go) its most unique holiday since the Capital was established on the shores of the Potomac. Factories, business houses, stores, and offices are closed, while the Government offices and the schools are open.

Holidays in Washington are generally the reverse of this. On no other holiday have the Government employees as a body ever had to work and the school children attend classes while others were "off."

Washington's first "heatless" Monday will give some opportunity to catch up on depleted coal supplies, though the saving will be slight, and principally in the big department store buildings.

U. S. Offices Heated.
Most of the big office buildings were at least partially heated because they housed Government offices.

The hotels and apartment houses were operating, and the stores were unloading freight in Washington yards to help clear away congestion.

Dr. Garfield is hopeful that persons generally will observe the spirit as well as the letter of the closing order.

Food stores, which in the original order were permitted to remain open only half a day, were granted a special dispensation last night under which they are permitted to sell goods throughout the day. Under the terms of the order, drug stores, which are to be open all day, can consume fuel for heating the latter part of the day for the sale of drugs and medical supplies only, but the Fuel Administration realizes that if the stores are open and heated there is nothing to prevent other sales.

The order for "heatless" Mondays will be considerably tightened up by redrafting certain features before next Monday, it was learned today. With the experience of the first day and the deluge of requests for interpretation as a guide, the order will be considerably amended so as to leave less room for equivocation. It is possible that the words "light" and "power" will be included in section 4, denying light and power for elevators to stores and offices on closing days.

Motion pictures theaters, bowling alleys, billiard rooms, dance halls, and other amusements are open as usual today, but they will be closed tomorrow. There are many stores in Washington on the first floors of apartment houses, or which are in reality, front rooms of residence property. In some cases heat cannot be shut off from such stores entirely. Officials of the fuel administration have been puzzled by requests for interpretation in many instances, but no general rule will be laid down for the future, because it is felt that general rules would pave the way for general evasion.

The change in ruling regarding food stores was made last night because of various interpretations that had been placed by State fuel administrators on the section of the order dealing with the distribution of food-stuffs.

The following telegram was sent last night to State fuel administrators instructing them to the change:

"As a result of information furnished by the food administration to the effect that confusion exists in the minds of the public as to the closing of food distributing stores on Monday afternoons the order of the fuel administration, dated January 17, has been suspended in so far as it provides for the closing of such food stores on Monday, January 21. This will permit food stores to remain open the entire day."

Most of the automobile salesrooms of the city were closed today. The automobile men, in most cases determined to obey the spirit of the fuel order, even though in instances showrooms were so situated that all heat could not be shut off. Some of the service stations were open, for service only.

An agreement for uniform observance on future Mondays will probably be drawn at a meeting of the Automobile Trade Association to be held this week.

CHILD EATS STRYCHNINE FOR CANDY; SOON DIES

(Continued from First Page.)

Washington today is observing (the usual words, "enjoying" or "celebrating" don't go) its most unique holiday since the Capital was established on the shores of the Potomac. Factories, business houses, stores, and offices are closed, while the Government offices and the schools are open.

Holidays in Washington are generally the reverse of this. On no other holiday have the Government employees as a body ever had to work and the school children attend classes while others were "off."

Washington's first "heatless" Monday will give some opportunity to catch up on depleted coal supplies, though the saving will be slight, and principally in the big department store buildings.

U. S. Offices Heated.
Most of the big office buildings were at least partially heated because they housed Government offices.

The hotels and apartment houses were operating, and the stores were unloading freight in Washington yards to help clear away congestion.

Dr. Garfield is hopeful that persons generally will observe the spirit as well as the letter of the closing order.

Food stores, which in the original order were permitted to remain open only half a day, were granted a special dispensation last night under which they are permitted to sell goods throughout the day. Under the terms of the order, drug stores, which are to be open all day, can consume fuel for heating the latter part of the day for the sale of drugs and medical supplies only, but the Fuel Administration realizes that if the stores are open and heated there is nothing to prevent other sales.

The order for "heatless" Mondays will be considerably tightened up by redrafting certain features before next Monday, it was learned today. With the experience of the first day and the deluge of requests for interpretation as a guide, the order will be considerably amended so as to leave less room for equivocation. It is possible that the words "light" and "power" will be included in section 4, denying light and power for elevators to stores and offices on closing days.

Motion pictures theaters, bowling alleys, billiard rooms, dance halls, and other amusements are open as usual today, but they will be closed tomorrow. There are many stores in Washington on the first floors of apartment houses, or which are in reality, front rooms of residence property. In some cases heat cannot be shut off from such stores entirely. Officials of the fuel administration have been puzzled by requests for interpretation in many instances, but no general rule will be laid down for the future, because it is felt that general rules would pave the way for general evasion.

The change in ruling regarding food stores was made last night because of various interpretations that had been placed by State fuel administrators on the section of the order dealing with the distribution of food-stuffs.

The following telegram was sent last night to State fuel administrators instructing them to the change:

"As a result of information furnished by the food administration to the effect that confusion exists in the minds of the public as to the closing of food distributing stores on Monday afternoons the order of the fuel administration, dated January 17, has been suspended in so far as it provides for the closing of such food stores on Monday, January 21. This will permit food stores to remain open the entire day."

Most of the automobile salesrooms of the city were closed today. The automobile men, in most cases determined to obey the spirit of the fuel order, even though in instances showrooms were so situated that all heat could not be shut off. Some of the service stations were open, for service only.

An agreement for uniform observance on future Mondays will probably be drawn at a meeting of the Automobile Trade Association to be held this week.

What Other Food Helps To Conserve Grape-Nuts

(Continued from First Page.)

Washington today is observing (the usual words, "enjoying" or "celebrating" don't go) its most unique holiday since the Capital was established on the shores of the Potomac. Factories, business houses, stores, and offices are closed, while the Government offices and the schools are open.

Holidays in Washington are generally the reverse of this. On no other holiday have the Government employees as a body ever had to work and the school children attend classes while others were "off."

Washington's first "heatless" Monday will give some opportunity to catch up on depleted coal supplies, though the saving will be slight, and principally in the big department store buildings.

U. S. Offices Heated.
Most of the big office buildings were at least partially heated because they housed Government offices.

The hotels and apartment houses were operating, and the stores were unloading freight in Washington yards to help clear away congestion.

Dr. Garfield is hopeful that persons generally will observe the spirit as well as the letter of the closing order.

Food stores, which in the original order were permitted to remain open only half a day, were granted a special dispensation last night under which they are permitted to sell goods throughout the day. Under the terms of the order, drug stores, which are to be open all day, can consume fuel for heating the latter part of the day for the sale of drugs and medical supplies only, but the Fuel Administration realizes that if the stores are open and heated there is nothing to prevent other sales.

The order for "heatless" Mondays will be considerably tightened up by redrafting certain features before next Monday, it was learned today. With the experience of the first day and the deluge of requests for interpretation as a guide, the order will be considerably amended so as to leave less room for equivocation. It is possible that the words "light" and "power" will be included in section 4, denying light and power for elevators to stores and offices on closing days.

Motion pictures theaters, bowling alleys, billiard rooms, dance halls, and other amusements are open as usual today, but they will be closed tomorrow. There are many stores in Washington on the first floors of apartment houses, or which are in reality, front rooms of residence property. In some cases heat cannot be shut off from such stores entirely. Officials of the fuel administration have been puzzled by requests for interpretation in many instances, but no general rule will be laid down for the future, because it is felt that general rules would pave the way for general evasion.

The change in ruling regarding food stores was made last night because of various interpretations that had been placed by State fuel administrators on the section of the order dealing with the distribution of food-stuffs.

The following telegram was sent last night to State fuel administrators instructing them to the change:

"As a result of information furnished by the food administration to the effect that confusion exists in the minds of the public as to the closing of food distributing stores on Monday afternoons the order of the fuel administration, dated January 17, has been suspended in so far as it provides for the closing of such food stores on Monday, January 21. This will permit food stores to remain open the entire day."

Most of the automobile salesrooms of the city were closed today. The automobile men, in most cases determined to obey the spirit of the fuel order, even though in instances showrooms were so situated that all heat could not be shut off. Some of the service stations were open, for service only.

An agreement for uniform observance on future Mondays will probably be drawn at a meeting of the Automobile Trade Association to be held this week.

What Other Food Helps To Conserve Grape-Nuts

(Continued from First Page.)

Washington today is observing (the usual words, "enjoying" or "celebrating" don't go) its most unique holiday since the Capital was established on the shores of the Potomac. Factories, business houses, stores, and offices are closed, while the Government offices and the schools are open.

Holidays in Washington are generally the reverse of this. On no other holiday have the Government employees as a body ever had to work and the school children attend classes while others were "off."

Washington's first "heatless" Monday will give some opportunity to catch up on depleted coal supplies, though the saving will be slight, and principally in the big department store buildings.

U. S. Offices Heated.
Most of the big office buildings were at least partially heated because they housed Government offices.

The hotels and apartment houses were operating, and the stores were unloading freight in Washington yards to help clear away congestion.

Dr. Garfield is hopeful that persons generally will observe the spirit as well as the letter of the closing order.

Food stores, which in the original order were permitted to remain open only half a day, were granted a special dispensation last night under which they are permitted to sell goods throughout the day. Under the terms of the order, drug stores, which are to be open all day, can consume fuel for heating the latter part of the day for the sale of drugs and medical supplies only, but the Fuel Administration realizes that if the stores are open and heated there is nothing to prevent other sales.

The order for "heatless" Mondays will be considerably tightened up by redrafting certain features before next Monday, it was learned today. With the experience of the first day and the deluge of requests for interpretation as a guide, the order will be considerably amended so as to leave less room for equivocation. It is possible that the words "light" and "power" will be included in section 4, denying light and power for elevators to stores and offices on closing days.

Motion pictures theaters, bowling alleys, billiard rooms, dance halls, and other amusements are open as usual today, but they will be closed tomorrow. There are many stores in Washington on the first floors of apartment houses, or which are in reality, front rooms of residence property. In some cases heat cannot be shut off from such stores entirely. Officials of the fuel administration have been puzzled by requests for interpretation in many instances, but no general rule will be laid down for the future, because it is felt that general rules would pave the way for general evasion.

The change in ruling regarding food stores was made last night because of various interpretations that had been placed by State fuel administrators on the section of the order dealing with the distribution of food-stuffs.

The following telegram was sent last night to State fuel administrators instructing them to the change:

"As a result of information furnished by the food administration to the effect that confusion exists in the minds of the public as to the closing of food distributing stores on Monday afternoons the order of the fuel administration, dated January 17, has been suspended in so far as it provides for the closing of such food stores on Monday, January 21. This will permit food stores to remain open the entire day."

Most of the automobile salesrooms of the city were closed today. The automobile men, in most cases determined to obey the spirit of the fuel order, even though in instances showrooms were so situated that all heat could not be shut off. Some of the service stations were open, for service only.

An agreement for uniform observance on future Mondays will probably be drawn at a meeting of the Automobile Trade Association to be held this week.

What Other Food Helps To Conserve Grape-Nuts

(Continued from First Page.)

Washington today is observing (the usual words, "enjoying" or "celebrating" don't go) its most unique holiday since the Capital was established on the shores of the Potomac. Factories, business houses, stores, and offices are closed, while the Government offices and the schools are open.

Holidays in Washington are generally the reverse of this. On no other holiday have the Government employees as a body ever had to work and the school children attend classes while others were "off."

Washington's first "heatless" Monday will give some opportunity to catch up on depleted coal supplies, though the saving will be slight, and principally in the big department store buildings.

U. S. Offices Heated.
Most of the big office buildings were at least partially heated because they housed Government offices.

The hotels and apartment houses were operating, and the stores were unloading freight in Washington yards to help clear away congestion.

Dr. Garfield is hopeful that persons generally will observe the spirit as well as the letter of the closing order.

Food stores, which in the original order were permitted to remain open only half a day, were granted a special dispensation last night under which they are permitted to sell goods throughout the day. Under the terms of the order, drug stores, which are to be open all day, can consume fuel for heating the latter part of the day for the sale of drugs and medical supplies only, but the Fuel Administration realizes that if the stores are open and heated there is nothing to prevent other sales.

The order for "heatless" Mondays will be considerably tightened up by redrafting certain features before next Monday, it was learned today. With the experience of the first day and the deluge of requests for interpretation as a guide, the order will be considerably amended so as to leave less room for equivocation. It is possible that the words "light" and "power" will be included in section 4, denying light and power for elevators to stores and offices on closing days.

Motion pictures theaters, bowling alleys, billiard rooms, dance halls, and other amusements are open as usual today, but they will be closed tomorrow. There are many stores in Washington on the first floors of apartment houses, or which are in reality, front rooms of residence property. In some cases heat cannot be shut off from such stores entirely. Officials of the fuel administration have been puzzled by requests for interpretation in many instances, but no general rule will be laid down for the future, because it is felt that general rules would pave the way for general evasion.

The change in ruling regarding food stores was made last night because of various interpretations that had been placed by State fuel administrators on the section of the order dealing with the distribution of food-stuffs.

The following telegram was sent last night to State fuel administrators instructing them to the change:

"As a result of information furnished by the food administration to the effect that confusion exists in the minds of the public as to the closing of food distributing stores on Monday afternoons the order of the fuel administration, dated January 17, has been suspended in so far as it provides for the closing of such food stores on Monday, January 21. This will permit food stores to remain open the entire day."

Most of the automobile salesrooms of the city were closed today. The automobile men, in most cases determined to obey the spirit of the fuel order, even though in instances showrooms were so situated that all heat could not be shut off. Some of the service stations were open, for service only.

An agreement for uniform observance on future Mondays will probably be drawn at a meeting of the Automobile Trade Association to be held this week.

HEATVILLE, Md., Jan. 21.—Little John MacGregor, four years old, son of W. H. MacGregor, is dead today because he took strychnine pills, thinking they were candy, and ate enough of them to kill four men.

The little fellow found the bottle of pills while playing in the house late Saturday. When his mother reached him he was unconscious with the empty bottle on the floor beside him. He died within half an hour.

HEATVILLE, Md., Jan. 21.—Little John MacGregor, four years old, son of W. H. MacGregor, is dead today because he took strychnine pills, thinking they were candy, and ate enough of them to kill four men.